Contents: Main features: 1. Basics 1.1 Resize Elements provides three tools for resizing images. The first one is very basic: half the size of the original image, a quarter of the original, the original size, three quarters of the original, and a fifth of the original. You can also specify “either to fit the window or to fill the window”. The other two options are “up, down, left, right”. Right click on the image and select “Image” > “Fit”. 1.2 Fix RAW The second basic tool is “Fix RAW”, which lets you “fix the RAW files”. Right click on the image and select “Image” > “Fix RAW”. 1.3 Invert The “Invert” tool inverts the image: If you click on the layer mask (the purple one) to select it, you have two options: Invert the layer mask (and therefore the image). Leave it selected but hide the layer mask (the default). If you hide the layer mask, but don’t select it, you also have two options: Invert all layer masks. Invert all layer masks except the selected one (but not all of them, only the one selected). Right click on the image and select “Image” > “Invert”. 1.4 Resize to Fit The resizing tool is “Resize to Fit”, which lets you resize an image so that 388ed7b0c7

This is going to sound weird. It does, but not in the way you might think. The story comes from The Hill and all the details are still up in the air but here's the rub. According to The Hill: Rep. Devin Nunes' staffer has been fired after allegedly leaking a document to the press, and the congressman himself is taking a leave of absence for an undisclosed amount of time. Nunes' top aide, Derek Harvey, was fired after an IT staffer found the document and tipped the press. The Hill has obtained the documents. Nunes sent the document to the press, who in turn reportedly shared it with multiple U.S. news organizations. The document apparently discusses potential surveillance by the National Security Agency of the Trump transition team. TRENDING: Black Lives Matter Activist Wearing 'Justice for Breonna Taylor' Shirt Walked into a Louisville Bar and Murdered Three People If true, this would look like Devin Nunes' hardline anti-Trump partisanship is not limited to opposing President Trump on the merits of his policies but is also very worried about who might be under surveillance. But here's the rub. The New York Times reported Tuesday the FBI is reviewing whether the alleged leak violated any laws. The two-page memo was reportedly written by former FBI Director James Comey and FBI sources (all redacted). The memo was classified top secret and only available to FBI agents and a few government officials. The memo claimed top GOP sources told the FBI in December 2016 that Trump associates were under U.S. intelligence surveillance. The FBI never concluded any kind of investigation into the Trump campaign. That's what the FBI reportedly told the DOJ and the FISA judge who approved the spy warrant on former Trump campaign volunteer Carter Page. The FBI said nothing of the sort was true when they presented their evidence to the judge. The Hill says the document was found on November 22, which is Nunes' last day as chair of the House Intelligence Committee. Nunes said in a statement: "I am not going to comment any further on this matter due to the pending investigations." The document, if leaked, is one of the most damaging to President Trump and his team that has ever been released by a member of the House of Representatives. The New York Times is now

Videos Photos U.S. federal officials said Monday that details of the shooting of five people at a Planned Parenthood clinic in Colorado have heightened concerns about the group's security practices, as investigators continue to pore over the shooting's details.

Investigators who have flown in from across the country to help find out why a gunman opened fire on October 27 at a Colorado Planned Parenthood clinic are wrapping up their five-day field trip in the Denver area and are expected to leave Monday. In an interview with ABC, Javad Fakharzadeh, a member of Planned Parenthood security, detailed how the shooter left a threatening voicemail message before he opened fire. The shooting remains under investigation, but John McDonald, director of the Department of Justice's Criminal Division, said federal officials are growing increasingly concerned over information they have received about the group's security. "I think that the concern and the concern is growing right now over the security protocols that are being followed by Planned Parenthood for their employees, the security protocols that they have in place, that they execute, and what their policies and training requirements are," he said. Meanwhile, the suspect in the shooting has not been identified, and officials from the US Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) said they are still looking into the matter. "This is an ongoing investigation and we are still in the preliminary stages of this," said Richard Kolko, special agent in charge of the FBI in Denver. Kolko said that investigators have issued search warrants to look at security video and will look into whether there were more than the four weapons that were found at the scene. "There were four weapons found in the vehicle that the alleged perpetrator arrived in at the time of the incident," he said. "We don't know for sure whether there were any other weapons in the vehicle, so we don't know whether he had more than that. We will see what we can find out in the next couple of days." However, he said investigators are looking into whether there are any similar "tying incidents" at other Planned Parenthood clinics, and whether that may be contributing to the lack of security. "As we say in our press releases, this is one investigation, so at this point it's too early to say
